

6th Leeds Girl Geek Dinner

Sector Event supported by the Digital Industries including Creative Digital, ICT and Print Sector Group

11 February 2010, from 7.30pm til late

City Inn, Leeds

Leeds Girl Geek Dinners Leeds presents Shanna Tellerman - founder and head of USA based Sim Ops Studios Inc which is developing Wild Pockets, a free web-based 3D game engine that is getting the game industry hot under the collar.

Shanna has been invited to Leeds for the sixth Leeds Girl Geek Dinner where the city's brightest female creatives, technologists, programmers, entrepreneurs, marketeers and PR professionals will come together to celebrate 'the real fun stuff behind technology'.

This is the second event in WYLLN's 'Inspiring Women' series and the video learning materials produced as a result of the event will help to support students across West Yorkshire at both college and university to see what studying science, technology and maths subjects can really do for them in future.

Shanna will be joined on the panel by Kaye Elling from the University of Bradford, an active campaigner for the recruitment of more women into technology and media careers. Kaye has worked for Infogrames, Sony, Acclaim and Blitz Games and has a keen interest in the subject of Women in Games, including the portrayal of women in computer games.

The sixth Leeds Girl Geek Dinner will take place at City Inn on 11th February at 7.30pm. For more information or to book tickets, go to www.leedsgirlgeekdinners.com.
